I hand you herceith displings from that paper, containing testimention in this matter, including a letter from the decorrect stating what is the material used, and the method of proparation. If it be true that the appetive for strong drink is destroyed by the use of this medicine its value cannot be over-assimabed. Taken in all its aspects, what other discovery can approach to it is value? How many here we all known and symmathised with whose apposition had the mastery army into the scheme, and were desirous of sympathiced with whose appoints had the mastery over them, and bastered them downward to rain. This does not diminish the value of total abstinence which is most certainly a presentice of intemperance, but it holds out house to these who have tallen moder.

The following card from Dr. D Unger fully explains his discovery, also giving the ingredients used, and the formula for compounding them, an interest in the subject:

To the Editor of the Sea Francisco Bulletis,

Sea:—Will you allow me, the discovere of the Cinchona Unte for Drankenness, the privilege of saying a few words in reference to the same! If so, permit me, first, to extend to you my beartfelt thanks for the interest you have taken in the subject: and, second, to say that the formula, as so extensively published in the newspapers, is far from being our getting it very much mixed. Decides, since the "interring" he had with me. I have very materially changed the properious of the ingredients in the remedy; at present concentrating the combined alkalished of six pounds of pure, frost Lora bark into one quart of extract, thereby making the medicine much more powerful and vare (as well as more vipensive), than I formerly did.

cation to sugar now on its passage which had been bought at old rates, and generally absord and impracticable. It is quite evident that the treasury Department and the sugar trade will never be recognized antagonists, and a good many hard words have passed between them. The department aris now as if it hoped to "get even" with the sugar men in the Congressional recess, when there is no power outside of the courts to stop the gratification of its meddling propensities. The sagar trade now andently longs for the reconvening of Congress, in the hope that a uniform tariff law will be passed that will put an end to these capticious disturbances of the sagar market. We should not be surprised if I am of the upinion that if drug stares miscellane casty make up this prescription from such barks as they would use, harm would be done, because there are, as reference to any or the authorities of thomsons will show, hundreds of varieties of the tree, about eight tenths of which are valueless. In addition, there are hundreds of spurious barks in the market.

Funny. The faithers to core, which I hear of, I find, or investigation, are cases where drug-store tincture has been used, instead of the double-triple extract I compound. Very many drug men have disposed of large quantities of cheap, dry and insert barks—some of which have laid in their drawers for years—at almost fishelms rates, otherwise fore and free deliber.

of which have laid in their drawers for years—at almost fabolius rates, charging four and five dollars a pause for hards worth from 16 to 40 cents, which circumstance is a misfortune and a pity, because it has brought the remedy into disrepute is many sections where it is easily needed. The ordinary tineture of the Dispensatory—made with six ounces of hard to the quart—has likewise been disposed of in large quantities and at high rates, purchasers being some of that it was my preparation, all of which is agreed wrang whilesale drug boases here in Chicago—Morriscon. Planmer & Co., Talman & King and Lord. Sometenberg & Co.—get their double triple tineture from me direct, well knowing its superior quality and certainty of action, and very many druggists and physicians all were the country do the rame. My profit is exceedingly small, viewed professionally, as you will see. I thange for the prescription and one pint of timeture $15$, the actual cost to me heing $11 ft per pint, which is shoot the are-rare quantity needed to bring about a cure.

I write you all this for the information of very many people who have written me from the Pacific coast, and whose thousand and one inquiries it is impossible for me to find time to reply to. No self-aggrantizament or profit is sought in the writing, as I am not a recker for gratuitous advertising or fame.

And now grant me leave to add another paragraph or two for the beacht of that clare of medical men who are always ready to jump at conclusions and "pood-poods" anything that comes to the surface as a therapeotic. Some of the class I have reference to considered in them reside in your city and have written to me—desire to know only Guerbona cares also builties. Here's the unity: Alcohol is a diffusion ordered me to take a flating and heat it as hot confident and accomplistics; that is, feeds upon itself, bullson. Here's the why: Alcohol is a diffusive stimulent and uncamplative; that is, feeds upon itself, each dose, after it has had its action on the nerve each dose, after it has had its action on the nerve entres, leaving them slightly perelyzed, requiring the next dose in he pareseed, if the same amount of the flannel. I was cured by enchantment. My appointed inturiestes, when he first begins drinking in one of our colleges, after suffering for some days with neuralgra in the head, which he himself uses larger doses or more frequent ones. Cinchona is an indiffuser estambled and exmeditive, a drop at the send of ninety days acting as powerfully upon the nerve centres as 60 drops did in the fast place. It supplemes alcohol, reverses the automatic nerve-cent sail for that artificial stimulant; and being a powerful tune and antipenode, brings up the natural appetite for food, and prevents the system from failing back to that condition of depression which induces stimulating. Every dose of Cinchons leares the nerve centers more sensitive to the succeeding dose.

dose. In conclusion, I am furnishing this remedy to druggiots, physicians and patients at almost less than a living profit, which gives little room for criticising my motives. The remoty is before the world, and the world must judge of its merits.

For many years I have been what is termed a moderate drinker, having the power, however, to cease the practice for irregular periods. During these times of abstinence I have had to exercise more or lines of anotherer i meets the sight of favorite herexages creating a desire accompanied by a thirst for the same. The various articles published in the Bulletin some months since of the peculiar qualities of Condonn Euleu, or Red Quill bark, attracted my attracted Cinchesa Eubra, or Red Quili bark, attracted my attention, and from carrosity as much as any other motive, I determined to test its effects personally.

I therefore procured a two-cance vial of the extract of this bark of G. Roethe, (whose preparation had been spoken of favorably by a correspondent in your paper.) using it as follows: For two days I took one teaspoontal every three boars, with one exception, each day, and finding its action on the pervous system so bracing, best the viul to a friend, who was not a drinker, to try its effect upon him. He returned the viul to me in a week's time, and I then used at irregular intervals the remainder of the extract, the rial to me in a week's time, and I then used at irregular intervals the remainder of the extract, possibly three-quarters of an ounce. The effect upon myself was not a repayment for liquous but as absolute indifference to them, as much as if I had never tasted either sprits, wine or beer.

This has now continued for a period of nearly six weeks, during which I have been exposed to the temptation of draik as I was previously. I have not only not drank any intering hererages, but have not had the slightest desire for them. The feeling of there has entirely left me, I not requiring the substitutes of soda water, lemonade, etc. that I formerly used. I find that my nervous system is stronger and that I have a constant flow of enlivs into my mouth, which was not the once formerly, and possibly to this Bernel a comparating at Contract and Sinder.
